CORE STRENGTHS: Leadership Training & Strengths Assessments

When life is going well and when we experience conflict, each of us feel and act based on the values that motivate us. Those internal values are our 'why' - and the 'why' leads to how, when and what! Some of us are motivated by relationships (people), others are motivated by purpose, others by analyzing (process) - and some of us are motivated by all three - depending on the specific circumstances that we encounter. Gaining an understanding of motivational values leads to an objective, positive and productive way to explain our motivations to others. Those explanations lead to positive communication and relational strengths. Core Strengths provides a simple framework for understanding the 'why' (motivational values) when life is going well and when we're experiencing conflict. Join us to explore how motivational values can educate, equip and enrich your relationships - professionally and personally.
